

RICH POLITICIAN CANED BY WIFE

Brooklyn Man Was Leaving the Theatre with Another Woman When His Angry Spouse Came Upon Them.

According to the Brooklyn police, a wealthy wholesale tobacco dealer, prominent in politics, is to-day nursing many bruises and cuts given him by his young and pretty wife because of his attentions to another woman.

The man was leaving the Montauk Theatre in Brooklyn about 11 o'clock last night. On his arm was a hand-somely dressed young woman.

As they waited for their carriage suddenly from behind a street lamp sprang a second woman, young and pretty, her face red and her eyes flashing.

Rushing up to the couple, she stood for a moment confronting them. They fell back before her. The man was half-dragging his companion through the crowd when the second woman snatched his heavy cane from his hand, and with a single blow, she struck him on the head. The man turned and saw the woman who had a wife at home, and he screamed and began to run.

The crowd about them circled out, the man turned to recover his cane to defend himself, but the angry woman continued belaboring him, striking him once in the face and cutting open his cheek. None of the crowd attempted to interfere.

Policeman Gallagher finally drew the woman away. The man turned and ran into the lobby, where his companion was sheltering with nervousness. They were led by ushers through the theatre and out by the stage entrance into De Kalb avenue.

The man is said to be a wholesale tobacco dealer prominent in political circles in Brooklyn.

D. I. MURPHY ON HONEYMOON
Ex-Pension Commissioner Will Attend Son's Wedding in Boston.

Former Pension Commissioner Dominick I. Murphy, now member of the Panama Canal Commission, made a flying passage through New York to-day en route to Boston. He was accompanied by his bride of two days and was on his honeymoon, which he will interrupt long enough to attend his son's wedding at the Hub. His son is Joseph Murphy, editor of the Twentieth Century Magazine.

Mr. Murphy was appointed Pension Commissioner in May, 1930. He was succeeded by Commissioner Ware. He was appointed to the Canal Commission last June. He was chief clerk of the Pension Office during the first administration of President Cleveland. He is fifty-six years old, and virtually grew up in the atmosphere of government departments, entering the service as messenger when a young man.

REV. DR. HILLIS LOSES MS.
Messenger Boy Drops It on Way to Publishers.

Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, is mourning the loss of four chapters of his latest book, which a messenger boy dropped while en route from Dr. Hillis's house in Brooklyn to the Macmillan Company in Fifth avenue, New York. The messenger boy dropped the package, he thinks, at the Brooklyn Bridge entrance.

Dr. Hillis is much disturbed by the loss of the manuscript and will appreciate any aid the public may render toward effecting its return.
